didn't care what kind of ball the league used. "When you hit the way I do," Leo laughed, "they can throw a red ball, a green ball, or a fancy dress ball, and I can miss it any old way. I can miss any and all kinds."

From the press box the yellow ball was much easier to watch than a white one, especially on long flies. Even when it rose against the sun it could be followed every inch of the way.

My guess is that as soon as the dye is perfected the yellow ball will be adopted.
