

The Student Fraternity Murder

by MILTON PROPPER

[That was the last communication, Rankin reflected, the student received from his wife, presumably from St. Louis.

"Do you still have your instructions?" he asked. "I'll want to see them."

"The girl shook her head. "No, I destroyed them after memorizing them. That was a part of her orders."

"Well, let's have the rest of your story—after you checked out of the hotel."

The directions in question, Myra Prentiss proceeded, arrived on Thursday, March fourth, allowing her ample time to be on the boat Sunday. During the voyage, as the detective already knew, she was to feign seasickness to escape observation. Unfortunately, however, she actually became ill; it was this neglected and trivial possibility, Rankin realized, which engendered the carelessness that disclosed the entire fraud. After the Florida docked at noon on Friday, the girl went to Philadelphia directly, where she met Laura Jordan at four o'clock. In two hours the actress secured all the details and evidences of the trip; at seven o'clock, she left to appear at headquarters. She had not, however, taken Myra's baggage. At the outset of the scheme, she had purchased duplicate sets of suitcases, one for the show-girl and her own set she brought with her weeks before.

Myra Prentiss returned immediately to St. Louis because of an attachment she formed there of her own, during her stay. Except inasmuch as it had lightened his problem of tracing her, Rankin did not long concern himself with this purely personal matter.

But his interest in Doctor Prince was intense. Thus far, all he knew of him was that, as a student at Hawthorne university in Fort Wayne he belonged to the Omicron chapter of Mu Beta Sigma. And, as a loyal alumnus, he notified the Philadelphia chapter of Jordan's matriculation, recommending him, Mr. Merrick, in his single business meeting with the physician, had divulged Stuart's presence at the eastern university, when they discussed schools during their conversation. Apparently, Arnold Prince had had no other connection with the boy. Now, however, it was obvious that he must have known all about him before that through the actress. His practice and residence, the detective recalled, were in St. Louis.

"Now about Doctor Prince, Miss Prentiss," he said, when the girl finished her narrative. "What else did Laura Du Monte tell you? Where does he live, for instance?"

"I suppose right here in St. Louis," Myra replied, "because she spoke of leaving with him from here. But I don't know the address."

"Then you never met the doctor or tried to learn what sort of chap he was?"

"The girl looked her surprise. "No, I didn't, Mr. Rankin. Why should I be curious, when I believed Laura's story that he was out of town with her?"

"It shouldn't be difficult to locate him, at any rate," Rankin confided to Captain Chambers; then to the girl: "Have you any idea how long they've been acquainted?"

"Well, only incidentally, I figure their affair must be going on over a year—at least, since last January. At first, I was afraid to agree to the proposition; and to reassure me, Laura said she had been cheating her first lover with him even last winter and he was none the wiser."

"And who is he? Can you tell me that or where he might be found?" Rankin queried.

But as he expected, Myra Prentiss was ignorant of any facts concerning the man she supposedly helped to outfit. Not once did the actress reveal his name or discuss her establishment with him. As with most of her explanation, Rankin was convinced his very existence was fictitious—part of her artifice to cloak her nefarious journey to Philadelphia. She had not dared supply the show-girl with her correct address in the East; hence the Lake Geneva address, probably an accommodation, from which Myra's letters (in the unlikely event there were any) would be forwarded back to Doctor Prince in St. Louis and thence on to her. Or perhaps the physician actually stayed at the Halfway house while she went east, to lend verisimilitude to their fake rendezvous. Whichever the case, inquiry at the lake would settle it; but of one point, the detective was practically certain. By now, Doctor Prince had surely returned to St. Louis—and somehow, he must apprehend him.

For unlike the mythical duped lover, the physician was a very real individual. And that notion of Mrs.

Jordan's action dealing with him came perilously close to the true situation last May, when Stuart had been his wife's dupe and that of her paramour. By her own admission the actress was intimate with Arnold Prince before her first contact with Jordan. And it seemed impossible that there was still another man for whom she double-crossed both her husband and her sweetheart.

If the physician were actually the lover over whom Laura Jordan quarreled and separated from Stuart, then he was manifestly as interested as she in preventing the boy from depriving her of the Jordan estate.

Rankin was amazed, once he concluded that they plotted the murder together, how the complete details of the crime fell into proper place. Step by step, he could trace every development—Doctor Prince with the knowledge, as a member of the fraternity, necessary to accomplish the deed, and the actress' actual commission of it. Since the central body of Mu Beta Sigma established the same secret code and ritual for every chapter, the physician could have informed Laura Jordan how to enter the Gamma chapter initiation; given her the secret knocks and passwords of recognition to get by the sergeant at arms; related how the pledges and brothers were arranged throughout the ritual; knew when the opportunity to reach Stuart would arise. And he could also describe the robes—perhaps supply her with his own costume, used years before. The actress then needed only a key to the fraternity house and must ascertain the date and hour of the initiation.

The detective's sudden inspiration at that instant sent his cogitations racing forward excitedly. Of course—the blond girl Benjamin Crawford accidentally met, who failed to keep the blind rendezvous with him the Tuesday night of the initiation! The woman must have been Laura Jordan; and far from being a pick-up, she deliberately engineered the meeting for a two-fold purpose. Thus, she guaranteed Crawford's absence from the ceremony and could take his place without the addition of an unaccounted member. And in fixing her date, she subtly learned from him at what hour and day the initiation would be held. Early in the case, this incident had suggested that a woman was involved, but he lacked the perspicacity to recognize the fact.

son, swam through the swollen waters to the bridge, removed luges from their automobiles and used the inflated inner tubes as life belts in which they towed the trio to safety.

Merrill, Ia., reported 5.55 inches of rain. Akron and Chatsworth, were surrounded by flooded fields. Communication lines to Chatsworth were down. Three hundred marooned Sioux City residents were cared for by police after their homes were flooded.

At Sioux City the Floyd river reached a stage of 18.4 feet, lacking only a few inches of the stage of 1926 when four persons died in a flood.

Illinois Central railroad tracks were washed away at Hinton. But there was no drought relief for three-fourths of Iowa, and none was predicted. Parched fields prevailed over all except the northwest.

Yesterday's highest temperature was 99 at Lamoni, and last night's minimum was 52 in the northeast around La Crosse, Wis.

It Might Have Been Huey Long

Washington, June 8—(UP)—A man dressed like Mahatma Gandhi strolled into the senate gallery today.

In sandals, loin cloth and white cape—and nothing else—the man almost paralyzed with astonishment the staid capitol police and sergeant-at-arms, Chesley Jurney before he was ejected.

Fat Girls! Here's A Tip For You

All over the world Kruschen Salts is appealing to girls and women who strive for an attractive, free from fat figure that cannot fail to win admiration.

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses and does it SAFELY and HARMLESSLY.

In the morning take one half teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar.

"It's the little daily dose that takes off the fat" and "brings that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

But be sure for your health's sake that you get Kruschen. A bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but little. You can always get Kruschen at Pfeiffer's Drug Store, Inc. and money back if not satisfied with results after first bottle.
