I'm in Deadly Earnest This Year About the Business of Farming

We're short of help—short of feed. That means some close figuring. I've got to do the best job of managing I've ever done in my life. I'm milking 16 cows—will plant more corn and will meet my soybean allotment. I'll feed the same number of pigs I marketed this winter. But there's no guess work in this program—it's all carefully planned.

"I'M USING MY HEAD" I've a boy in Italy—my neighbor has one in New Guinea—I figure the best job I can do here is the least I can do for them. By doing it right, I make more money, too. That's going to be mighty important after the war.

"The 'Missus' is right in there pitching, too. Last year she bought 500 'EXCEL' chicks—bought them instead of cheaper chicks because she argued results would more than offset the difference. She was right. She had fryers on the market far ahead of some of her neighbors—heavy ones, too, when prices were peak. She had plenty of early laying pullets and most of them have been at it ever since. She's buying the same number again this spring—says she's going to buy two or three more bonds again next winter for Tom. What's that? Oh, sure, they're 'EXCEL' again."

On the farm, it's market returns that count. With beef, pork, poultry and dairy products that means quality breeding, vigor, vitality, low mortality, economical gains, early maturity. These mean more food quicker. They also mean maximum profits. "EXCEL" chicks stand the test, however you apply it. They "measure up" fully to the war-time emergency.

Ducklings and Poults

For your own "extra" meat and for extra 1944 profits, too, investigate the possibilities of a few ducklings or poults. But remember—our 1944 supplies are limited.
