"The Name Is Familiar"

BY FELIX B. STREYCKMANS and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Tom and Jerry

TAKE some egg whites, egg yolks, powdered sugar, brandy, rum and whiskey, mix it all up, and you have a Tom and Jerry. Take the name of America's greatest bartender, Jerry Thomas, mix that up, and you again have Tom and Jerry. Yes, it was Jerry Thomas, of the old Metropolitan in New York city who concocted the drink that immortalizes his name. Because his parents wanted him to become a minister and because he was the author of a book "The Bartender's Guide"—he was called Professor Thomas. That was not such a far-fetched title for a bartender of the 1860s who could write a book—imagine a bartender then who could just write!

Jerry Thomas was born in New Haven, Conn., in 1825. His parents, sent him to college so he could be a preacher. But, at the age of 20, he quit school to carry on an experiment to determine whether college men could imbibe alcoholic liquors in unlimited quantities.

In later years he became head bartender at the famous El Dorado in San Francisco where he invented the Blue Blazer, then he went to St. Louis where he invented the Tom and Jerry. He tended bar all over the United States, Central America and parts of Europe, starting the Europeans especially with his $4,000 worth of silver bar utensils and his unlimited repertoire of mixed drinks.
